HOUSEWIVES DAILY ECONOMY CALENDAR

By FRANCES MARSHALL.

Do You Eat Enough Hard Food?

Do you eat enough hard food? If you don't eat plenty of food that gives bulk your diet is not properly planned. For bulk is necessary to perfect physical condition. It is good both for the teeth and for the digestion.

It would be rather interesting to compare a dinner such as some of us eat perhaps eight times out of nine with the sort of dinner primitive man ate. To be sure, primitive man eventually lost his teeth, and he had no dentist to replace them. But primitive man probably had a very good digestion, and while he was young his teeth probably were much stronger and sounder than ours are. Without dentists, where would we be today?

Here is a dinner which is fairly usual—a soup—requires no work from the teeth and gives no bulk; white bread, which is soft and which gives no bulk to speak of; meat of some sort, mashed potatoes and a vegetable, perhaps a salad, and a dessert of custard or gelatine.

Now in such a meal there is very little bulk—very little waste material. It may be nourishing, it may be appetizing, but it does lack the bulk that every meal ought to have.

Whole wheat bread gives bulk. Any of the bran products do, and so do the coarser cereals, cooked and uncooked. Cabbage and other of the coarser vegetables give bulk.

And in the meal quoted there is very little work for the teeth. Zwieback substituted for the bread would give the teeth a little healthy work. Celery would also give the teeth something to do. And certain sorts of dessert, made of raw fruit, or a rather hard baked pudding, could also give more hardness to the meal.

HOROSCOPE.

"The stars incline, but do not compel."

Friday, March 17, 1916.

Neptune is in a mildly favorable aspect today, but Mercury is adverse. The day would be fairly lucky.

Under this rule it is held to be especially advantageous to use oil, whether as a medicine or an unguent.

It is an auspicious time for ocean traffic. Commerce comes into a rule that is promising.

There is a threatening sign read as preaging some message that will be alarming to the country.

Editors and publishers are warned to be cautious while this configuration prevails. The danger of libel suits and litigation growing out of personalities is believed to increase while Mercury is in evil place.

Agitation concerning reforms in public schools is likely to reach a critical point in certain cities, especially those of the East. The stars indicate radical changes in existing educational methods in which waste and bad management will be revealed.

Religious suspicion and controversy probably will mark the discussion of many public problems. Planetary influences are strongly toward the crystallization of prejudice and the breaking down of old conventions.

Legend and history are well-governed today and the prognostications are encouraging for persons of foreign birth, who have ambition to hold official positions, whether these be high or humble.

Deaths of persons who have gained eminence in the artistic professions will be numerous through the whole spring season, it is predicted.

Damage to certain promising crops is foreshadowed and severe losses through floods.

A great influx of titled visitors to the United States is prophesied for the spring and summer. Several of these may cause resentment by unwise speeches.

Persons whose birthdate it is may have disappointments and setbacks in financial matters. They should practice economy.

Children born on this day may be impatient at set tasks and inclined to evade duty. These subjects of Places are often gifted with mediumistic powers.

French toast with rhubarb—Trim the slices of bread and dip in beaten egg, flavored with a little salt, and fry to a golden brown. Arrange on a hot platter and on each put a tablespoon of well-sweetened stewed rhubarb.

Scalloped tomatoes—Drain the juice from a can of tomatoes. In a pudding dish arrange a layer of bread crumbs, on top of which place a layer of tomatoes. Alternate with layers of tomatoes and bread crumbs till the dish is almost full. Garnish with pepper and salt and bits of butter. Bake until brown on top.

Pumpkin pie—Ingredients for the filling are one and one-half cups of canned pumpkin, two-thirds of a cup of brown sugar, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-half teaspoonful of ginger, a little salt, two eggs, cup and a half of milk, and a cup of cream.

Mix ingredients in order given, and bake in a flaky crust without covering the top of the pie. A meringue of white egg may be added after the pie is baked. Beat the whites to a stiff froth for this, adding a little sugar and a squeeze of lemon juice. Brown the meringue slightly.

Aunt Chatty's Mothers' Club

Conducted by Mrs. Charity Brush

Little Mothers.

THIS is a real Mothers' Club, for the benefit of mothers everywhere who are struggling with questions of discipline, training, education, clothing, for the children. Write to Aunt Chatty of problems which are vexing you, and she will advise and help you to a solution of them. Write to her, too, of your own discoveries, of methods you have found successful in smoothing the rough paths of life for the tender, childish feet, that through the Mothers' Club your experience may be of benefit to other mothers who are still tangled in the web of perplexity you have so happily unraveled.

Co-operation is the secret of success in any business; so why not in the business of motherhood, that highest and holiest calling which always has been and always will be woman's crown of glory, no matter what other avenues of usefulness may be opened to her? Address Mrs. Charity Brush, care of this paper.

Our sympathies have all been roused many times by pictures and magazine articles depicting the hard lot of the "little mothers" on the lower east side in New York City. Small girls tugging heavy babies, their little bodies drawn down by the weight of children, the case of only a year or two younger than themselves, perhaps, have seemed to call to us to rush to their rescue—to lighten their burden so that they, too, might have some of the normal child life, time to play, freedom to run and hop and skip as every light-hearted young thing ought to do. The lot of the children of the poor is hard, and we might well consider ways and means to lighten it. But are there not mothers among our own friends who are making "little mothers" of their own elder daughters?

"How can you suggest such a thing? The very idea!" I think I hear some of you reproach me thus. "Of course, people in our rank in life do not impose on our little girls in that way!"

I am not so sure we do not, unthoughtfully, dear mothers, sometimes share our responsibilities on to the young shoulders, believing because the little ones make no complaint that they do not feel the burden we have laid upon them.

A woman of my acquaintance came to me some time ago and said she wanted to have a talk with me. She is probably 45 years old and she has never married. Her story affected me deeply, because I felt, as she does, that she was never given a chance in life.

"As the oldest of five children," she said, "and after the birth of her second child my mother simply laid everything on me. I took care of the younger children, washed their faces in the mornings, heard their lessons, saw that they were tidy at school, did everything, in fact, that a mother should have done. Mother lapsed into a state of semi-invalidism and thought she could not do anything about the house. And she didn't, except to have babies!"

"I was older," I felt that I ought to do something to earn money, for my means were not unlimited, and so I took the examination and found a place to teach school in our little town. I wanted to go to college, but my mother would not be spared. I was needed at home to help after school hours. Then I tried to put by a little money out of my slim salary each month—it was only thirty-five dollars a month that I was paid—so that I could take a trip once in a while, but as sure as I got fifty or seventy-five dollars ahead I was asked to lend it for some pressing need at home; lend it, mind you, but no loan was ever paid back to me.

"So many things happened! First, my second sister was married and my loan was used to buy her wedding clothes; then the brother had to have fifty dollars to meet some extra expenses at college, and I gave that. When father died I was my money that paid the funeral expenses—I could save quite goodly sums after all, you see, because I did not pay board at home and there were few temptations to extravagance in my small town. Now mother is dead and I think I ought to be released, don't you? But my brother wants me to lend him the $300 I have in bank now—he says it will mean the success of his whole business career if he can just get this little sum to tide him over a crisis now, but it seems to me that my time ought to come some time, don't you, Aunt Chatty? I can't wait to let him have my money."

I looked into her candid face and I felt that she had done her duty. I told her I thought too much self-sacrifice made the others selfish and it was due them as well as herself to tell them frankly she intended to live her own life from this time forth.

Just a few days after my talk with this dear woman I had a pitiful little letter

—you bake faster and better
—you bake and serve in the same dish
—you have a spotless kitchen
—you don't have to scour and scrub
—you save time, work, fuel, pantry space, money

PYREX Glass Dishes for Baking are made by a new process glass that withstands the heat of the hottest oven and gives quicker, more thorough, more uniform baking. You actually see the food while it is baking. No odor, grease or flavors are absorbed. The dishes, taken from the oven and placed just as they are on the table, yield their contents piping hot, savory, delightfully rich in flavor.
